In celebration of International Education Week (IEW), November 12-16, the International Programs Center (IPC) has organized, in conjunction with several other departments and organizations on campus, an exciting schedule of international and intercultural activities to promote international education and exchange around the world.

This year’s IEW will kick off with the Annual Study Abroad Photo Competition where everyone will have the opportunity to stop by, view photographs depicting life abroad and vote for your favorites. Other events will include ISA display (with organization information, T-shirts, semi-formal tickets and flag face painting); Job Success for International Students workshop; multicultural movie night featuring “Smoke Signals” in celebration of Native American Heritage Month; International Jeopardy game night; and the Global Leadership Intercultural Workshop: Seeing Through Other Eyes; and two faculty workshops: the Faculty Led Study Abroad Workshop: Interest Session and the Faculty Led Study Abroad Workshop: Risk Management.

The IEW activities will conclude with Friday Fest featuring India and Pakistan. Don’t miss this unique opportunity to learn about India and Pakistan through a variety of pictures, language, performance and food. A reception and the announcement of the Study Abroad Photo Contest winners will follow the presentation and performance. For a detailed schedule of IEW events, please visit www.uncg.edu/ipg/

ISA goes to Washington D.C.: “International Students Invade D.C.” by Rene Treiber

Over fall break the international students of UNCG explored a new side of the USA. On Saturday, October 13, three vans left rural North Carolina heading for the Nation’s capital. The hostel was located right in the middle of downtown D.C. convenient to the National Mall with its amazing historic sites and museums. We also visited the Arlington Cemetery to view the grave of John F. Kennedy and Georgetown to buy some designer clothes. Adams Morgan with its cool bars and clubs was the place to be in the evenings when downtown D.C. was deserted. Everyone is eagerly looking forward to seeing NYC over Thanksgiving break!

INTERLINK’s First Fall Term

INTERLINK students have been enjoying activities both on and off campus as students took a guided tour of UNCG campus and learned a little bit about the history. Students also visited Blowing Rock, NC with the Piedmont International Fellowship; they got to know other international students from the area while hiking and enjoyed a party together in the evening.

Opportunities to interact with UNCG students have been especially rewarding. UNCG volunteers are involved with conversation groups, set up around campus to allow INTERLINK students to meet with UNCG students once a week and discuss culture and experiences in an informal setting. Peter Frey took his class to Guilford College to meet with an English class there—his class also did a project on plastic surgery and met with a local practitioner. Interactions at International Honors Coffees stimulated even further discussions amongst the INTERLINK students.

During the final week of INTERLINK’s first fall term, debates, ad campaigns, skits and travel presentations were held—students filmed a skit (involving plastic surgery and President Bush) and shared it at graduation.

Thank You to Madge Hubbard!

Madge Hubbard was appointed Director of the UNC Exchange Program in February 2006 and this month she celebrated her fifteenth year of service for the state and in International Education. Madge served most recently as Deputy Director of Study Abroad at UNC-Chapel Hill, where she had fourteen years of strategic managerial experience in student exchange and study abroad programming.

In an interview Madge remarked that it has been a most rewarding career: “individual students have thanked me for helping them to go abroad. I’ve had the opportunity to travel abroad to represent the UNC system - we have a great reputation, not only for academics, but for our well behaved, engaged, and intellectually curious students. I have also learnt just as much about North Carolina as about the foreign cities where we send our students. And it’s amazing working with people all over the world - I’ve made friends on every continent.”

A former UNC EP Coordinator from UNC-Chapel Hill, Madge is also a long time member of NAFSA. Madge has a degree in English from Colorado College, and studied abroad in England at Wroxton College of Fairleigh Dickinson University. When asked where Madge saw herself in 15 years, she replied “Mexico – I’ve been thinking about the possibility of retirement in another country so I can finally have another study abroad experience!” Congratulations, Madge, and thank you for all your hard work!
